expands with numerous remodeling changes

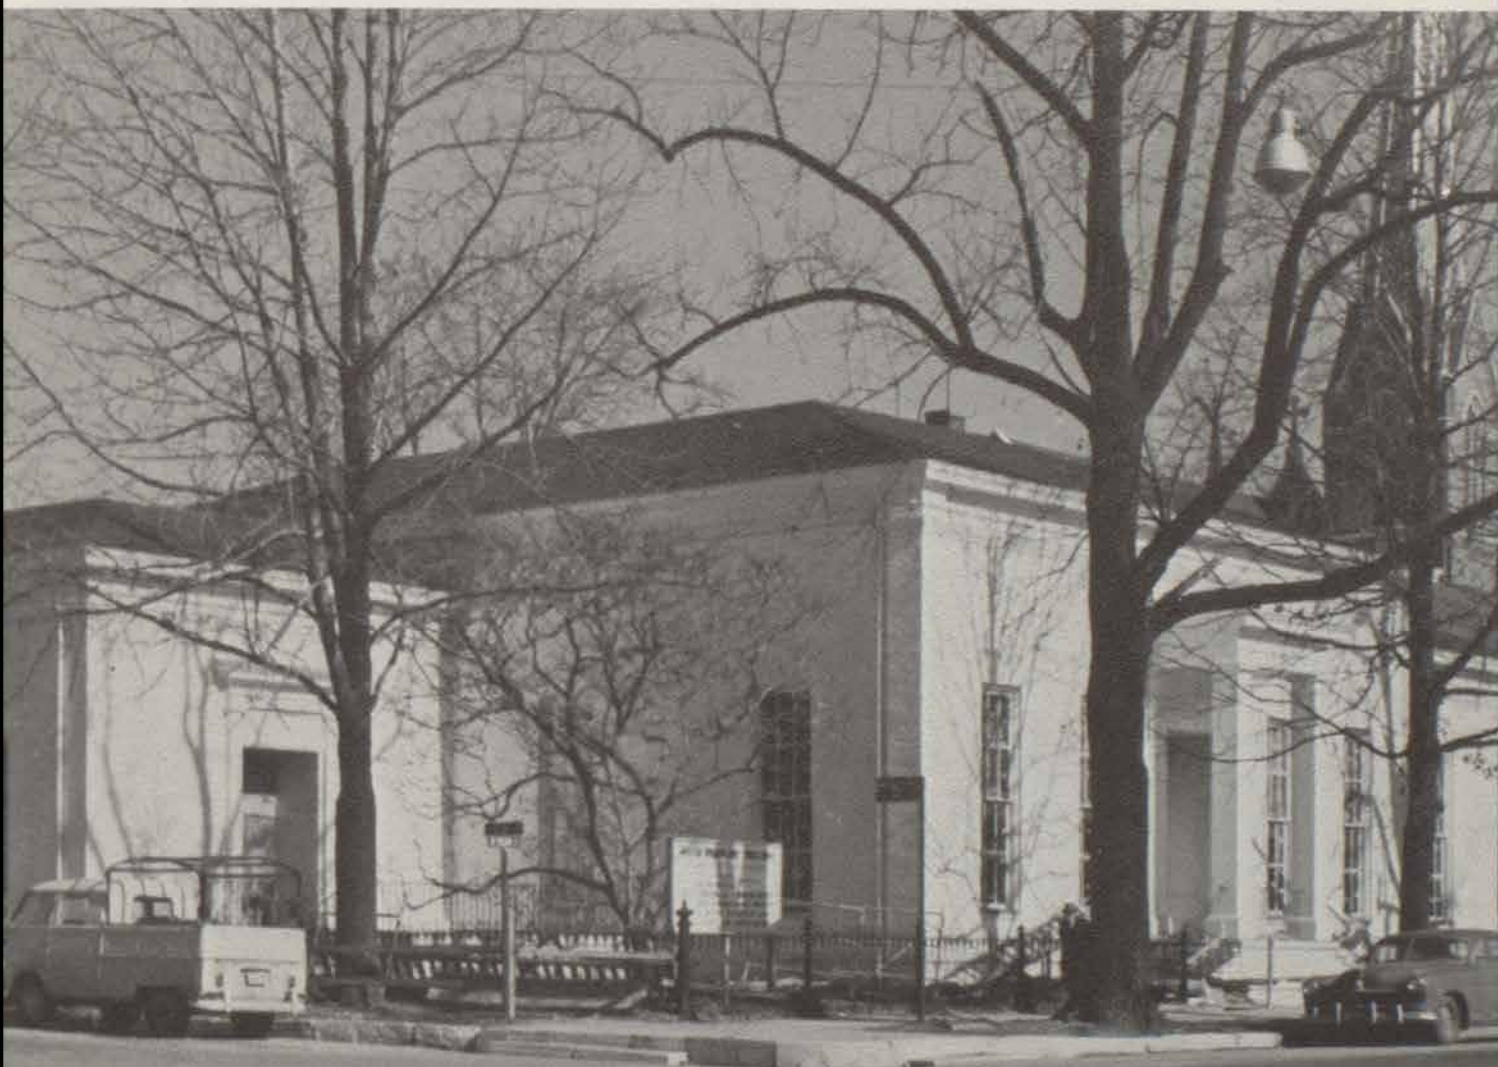

School and community were continually interlaced by events during the 1966-67 school year. MCHS influenced and was influenced by changes in the community. School groups and individual students participated in the Regatta Parade and Regatta festivities, Farm-City program, community sponsored oratorical, art, and writing contests, and a Jazz Festival held in honor of Mr. Frank Klein. Directly bearing upon the classroom, the enlargement of the library affected MCHS students by providing increased facilities for study and research.

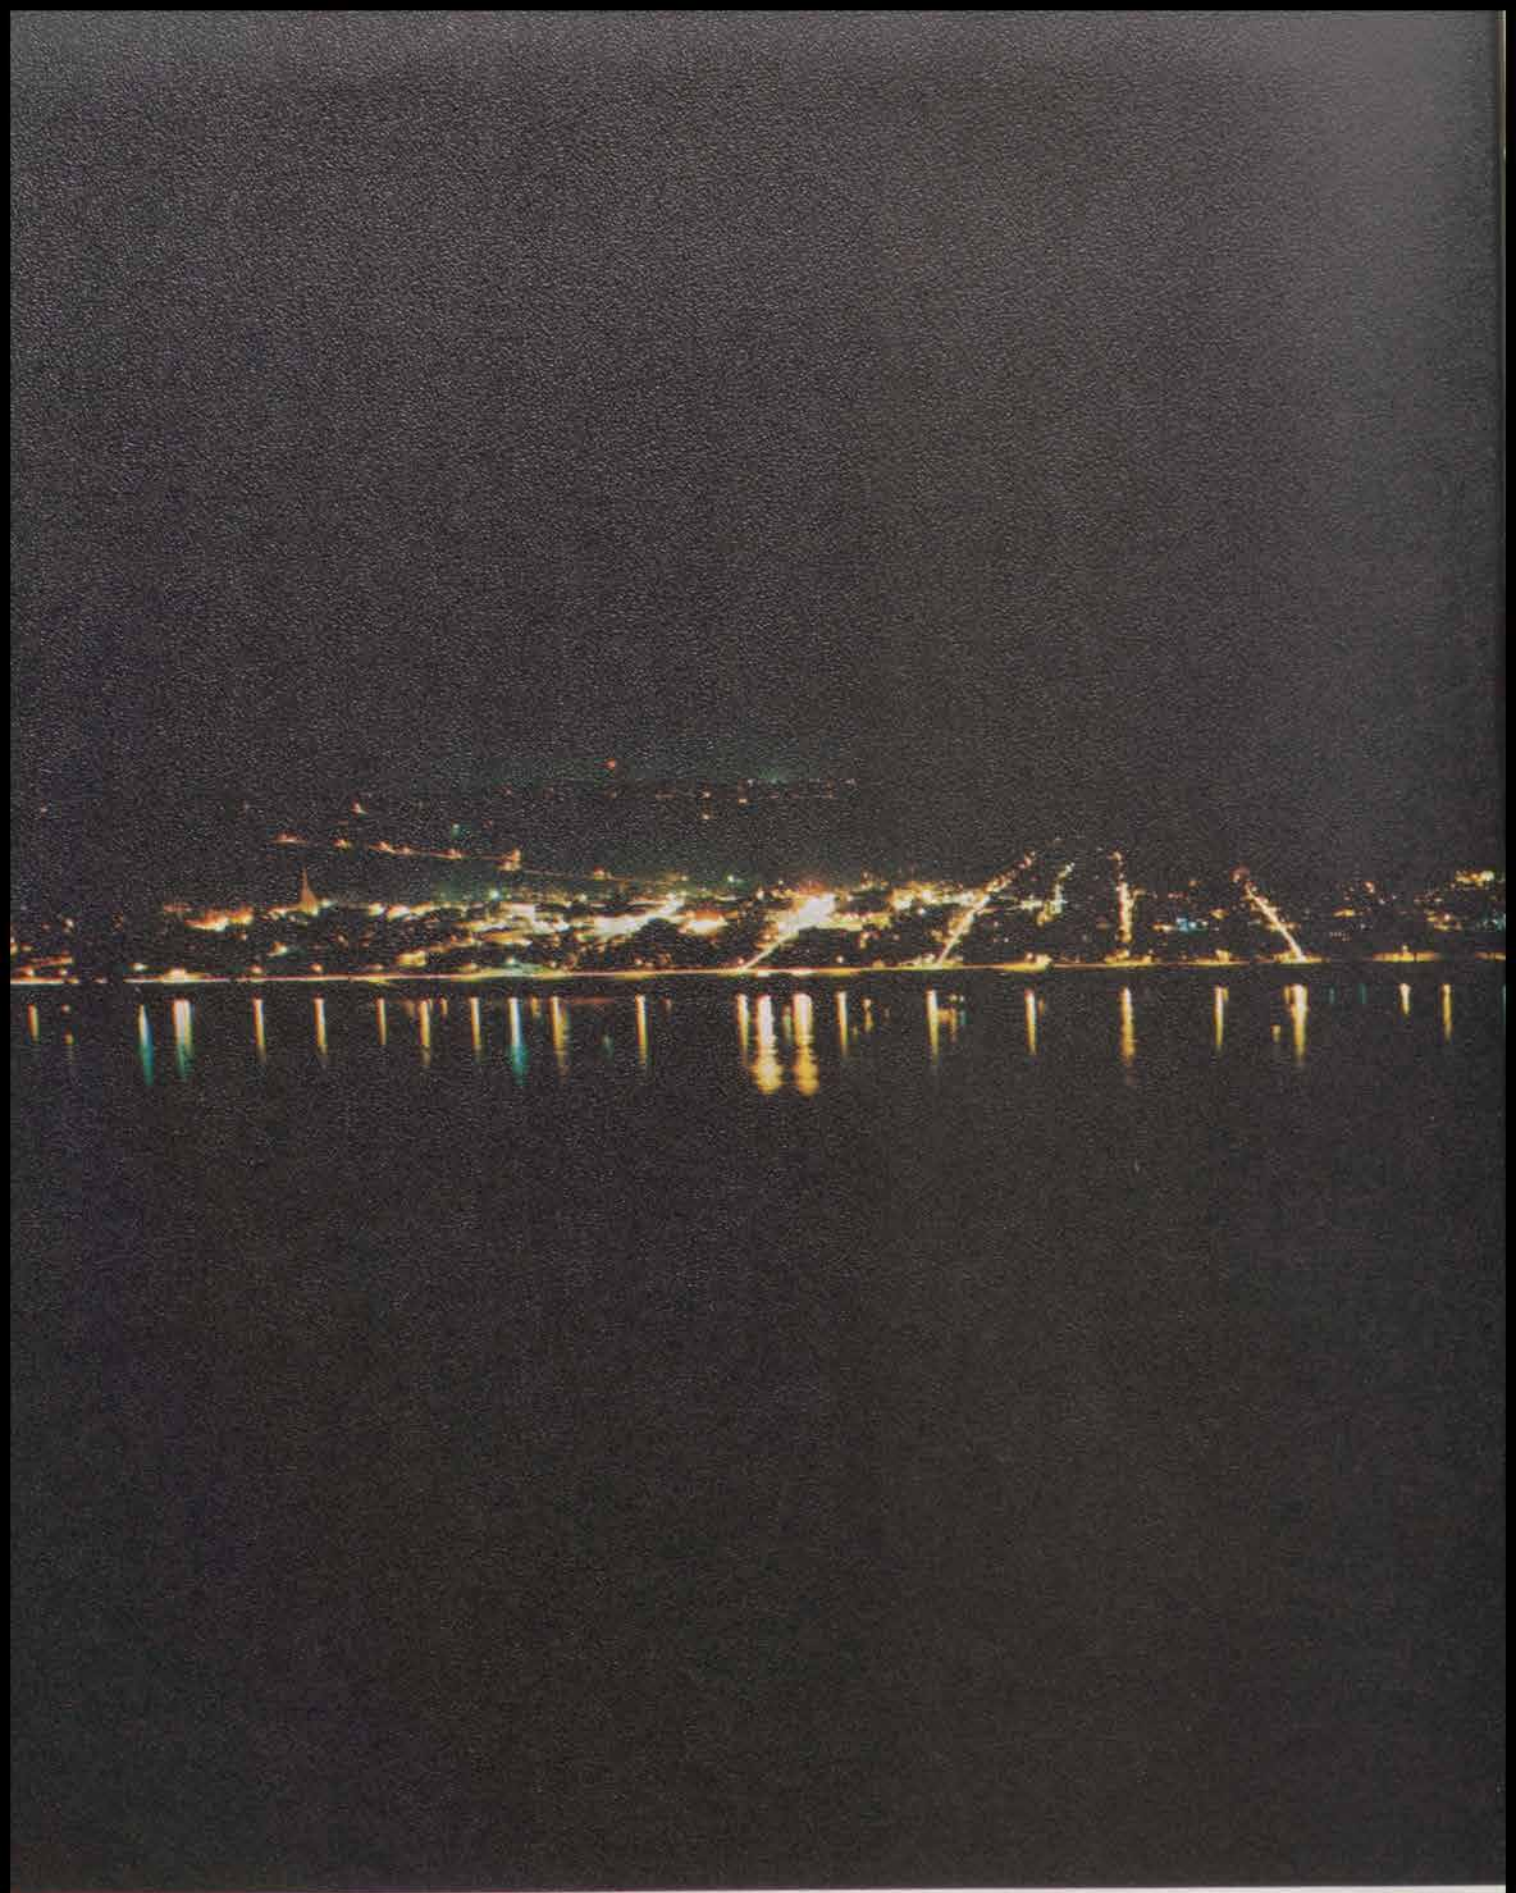

While the community underwent the off-year congressional and local elections, students expressed their ideas through mock balloting and a referendum on the voting age. In the same month, the teen center opened providing another place for teenage recreation.

In November the school and community experienced the sad loss of Mayor Markt Lytle. Mayor Lytle was serving his second term as mayor.

THE NEW TEEN CENTER provides entertainment for area teenagers.

In the school year 1966-67, change brought awesome meanings and implications. We students returned to Madison High last fall to confront a broader curriculum, a larger faculty, and prospects for physical school enlargement. Fall 1966 heralded local, state and national elections, which culminated in significant political realignment. Internationally, U.S. commitments in Southeast Asia prompted increased consternation among all Americans concerning the necessity of war and eventual U.S. goals for world leadership.

We of the "now generation" are poised at the threshold of an era, the like of which has never been seen. The struggle of Man vs. Machine—the ultimate battle against the inevitable "phaseout" has begun. It is a time for decision, a time perhaps for a bit of soul-searching. We'd "better start swimming or sink like a stone, for

Plantation, April atmosphere is prom motif

Greeted by sophomores handing out favors, guests at the 1967 Junior-Senior Prom passed over a footbridge into a world with a blue streamer sky and mint green, crepe paper walls. A stream filled with goldfish flowed under the bridge while two fountains played. One, a miniature waterfall, spurted from a rock-pile. Positioned in the green wall was "April Love 1966-67" in primrose yellow.

Juniors and seniors danced to the "soul" music of the "Castaways" of Lexington, Kentucky, who performed from the columned porch of a Southern mansion. Guests drank green punch and nibbled green and yellow petits fours served by sophomores.

"TREACHEROUS WITCH BETRAYER," shrieked Sandy (Candy Combs) as she argued with Morgan LeFay (Sally Renne).

"Prithee, telleth who thou art, odd fellow," Elaine asked Hank. A Connecticut Yankee, Hank, was an anachronism in the world of spears and swords, archaic English, boys in tights and flowing robes, and girls in floor-length gowns. These combined brought the sixth century to life in A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court.

The play, which contrasted medieval idealism with New England practicality, had to be delayed to November 7 and 8 because of a twelve-inch snow.

Royalty reigns over athletic events

Sheila Hargesheimer was crowned October 14 as Homecoming Queen before a large crowd in ceremonies prior to the football game against Salem. After her coronation Sheila handed the football to the team captains to begin the game.

Jeannie Long received the title of Miss Cub, queen of basketball, February 17. The formal ceremony, sponsored by the FHA, included the crowning and presentation of roses and robe by Cub Danny Smith. All senior basketball players were on the floor for the occasion.

These two girls, whose titles are held in high esteem, were selected from the senior class and were elected by the entire student body.

Seniors' MAN ANSWERS is comedy pinnacle

LOOK OF DISBELIEF appears on Susan Miller's face as Greg Scott tells her, "Not Au Revoir, Miss Stacey, but good-bye."

Half-French, half-Bostonian Chantal Stacey underwent competition for Gene Wright's affections in If a Man Answers. Despite the competition, Chantal, aided by her mother, married Gene. The marriage was complicated by Chantal's efforts to train Gene, the interference of Tina Brooks, and the appearance of a secret lover.

The play brought together varied costumes and locales. Many changes of scene required the use of microphones and acting areas in front of both the main curtain and speakers' curtain.

NEWLY INDUCTED MEMBERS of National Honor Society are J. Long, M. Ridder, K. Geyman, V. Harr, L. Sherwood, and J. McKay.

Honor Day climaxes

Beans flew, balls were bounced, and bottles spun on Senior Honor Day. Besides the pins, certificates, and scholarships awarded, Senior band members showed "A Typical Day in Band." Thespians presented a skit on class history, and choral members portrayed the old story of "late again, three and a third per cent off!"

'A Very Good Year'

Seniors closed the year in song, opening Honor Day with a parody of "Seven Little Girls" and closing with "It Was a Very Good Year." During the program Herff Jones awards and scholarships were distributed. Finally, Seniors presented resigning Assistant Principal Richard Graham with a plaque in recognition of his three years at MCHS.

scholastic maturity

The spotlight was on scholarship; the ingredients included a mammoth light-and-navy blue mortarboard, bearing the motto Finimus Coepturi (We finish to begin), orchids, and two light blue archways—symbols of the Class of 1967.

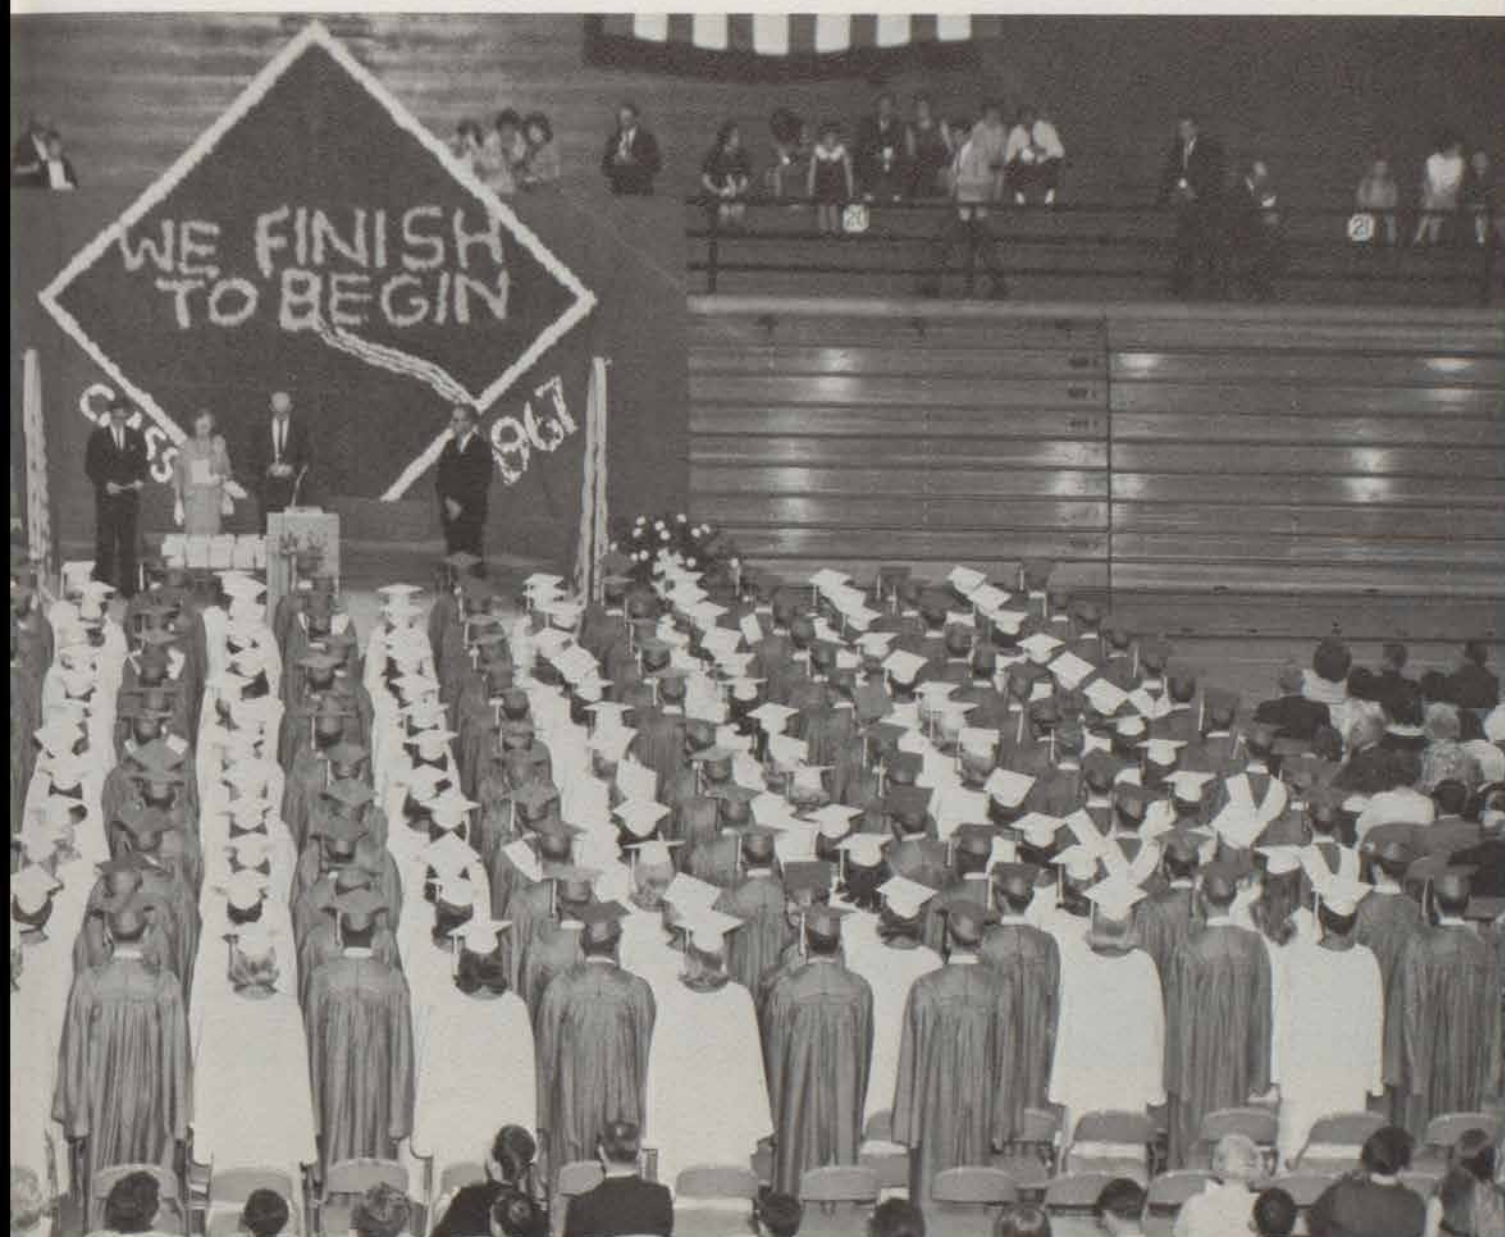

For the first time, graduation exercises were originally scheduled to be held in the MCHS football stadium. However, because of unfavorable weather conditions, the 104 Baccalaureate and Commencement were held in the Connor K. Salm Memorial Gymnasium.

Several seniors handled the Commencement presentation. Speakers were Susan Miller (Invocation), Greg Scott (Welcome), Terry Lodge (Intention), Bob Canida (Farewell), and Judy Utter (Benediction).

ACADEMICS

For six periods of the day on Mondays through Fridays, students at Madison wear down hundreds of pencils, erase countless errors, and use large amounts of notebooks, typing paper, and mimeographed tests. Engaged in a seemingly endless four years of study, students daily attempt to corner bits of knowledge.

Affected by the times and the changing world, academics encompass both established and new principles. This section is a glimpse at the backbone of the school—academics.

avenues of world literary accomplishments

Indeed, there was "something old, something new" in the MCHS English department this year.

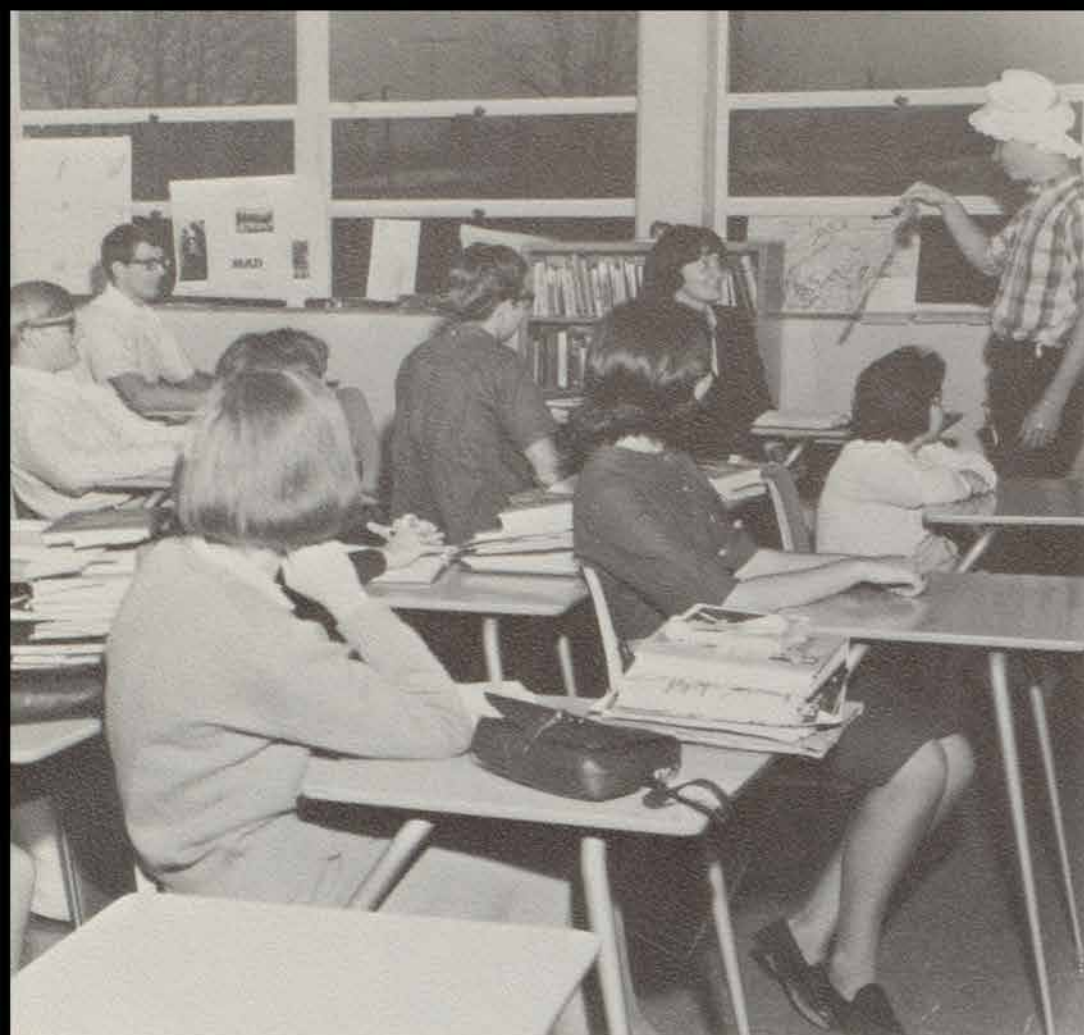

Mr. Wharton and Miss Lockard came to Madison High this year, joining the veteran staff. Mr. Wharton assumed some of the freshman English duties and coached the debate team, while Miss Lockard contributed her services to English teaching and library work. Alterations broadened and enriched available resources. New books and filmstrips were introduced in the reading lab to replace their worn counterparts.

In the speech section, a novel means of expressing oneself through poetry arose, the idea of reading to the background of music. Some of the English classes in all grades employed ENGLISH 2600 and ENGLISH 3200, pilot studies in grammar usage based on immediate student reinforcement.

Such diversified changes complemented customary courses of study in the English department, and increased emphasis on student writing. Also, group studies of outstanding novels helped provide an extensive literary background for students.

COLORFUL TRANSPARENCIES enliven the practicality of the overhead projector. Mrs. Moore uses the projector as an aid to grammar instruction.

A PARANOIC, a person having delusions of grandeur, is portrayed by Gene Sizemore as he acts out the part of a witch casting a spell on Karen Mason.

present and future merge in a study of man

The MCHS social studies department dealt with in-depth studies of shifting interhuman and international relations. Sophomore world history classes traveled to Louisville in December to tour the Speed Art Museum. Approximately fifty seniors from the civics and governments classes journeyed to the Indiana General Assembly, February 7.

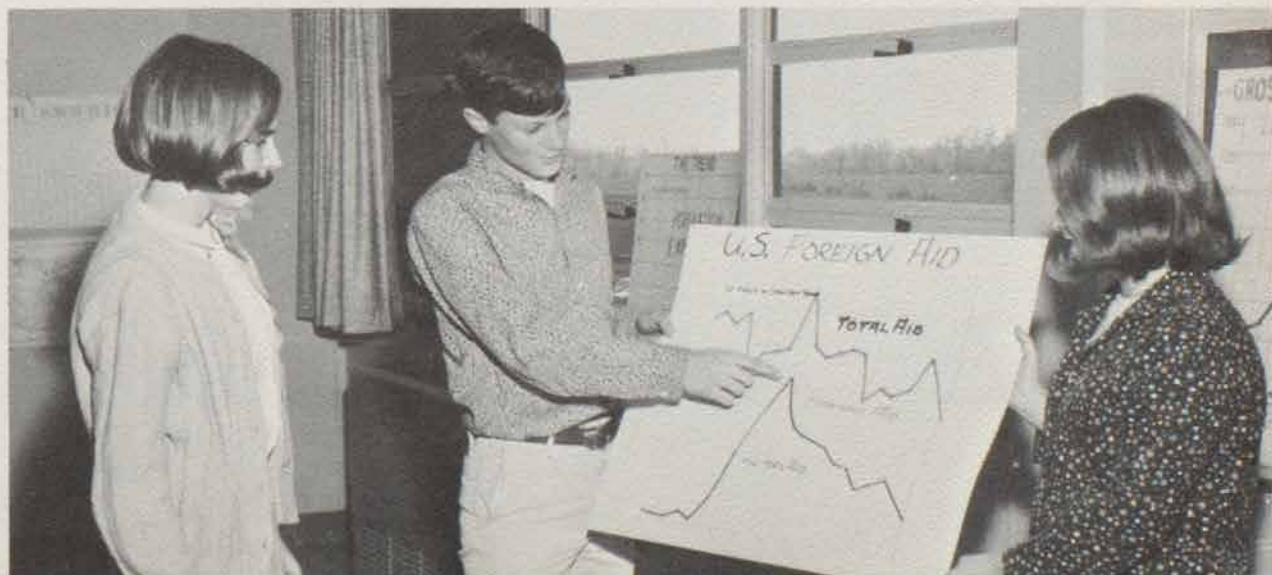

As in the past years, an MCHS student represented the high school at the Ball State Government Leadership Conference. Paul Butler attended this year.

STUDENTS OFTEN NEED ASSISTANCE from the teacher in working out difficult math problems. Here Mr. Imel offers advice to Randy Reed on one of his puzzling algebra problems.

DIAGRAMS USED AS ILLUSTRATIONS are needed for comprehension of mathematical processes. Don Kring and Thelma Stockdale begin constructing graphs.

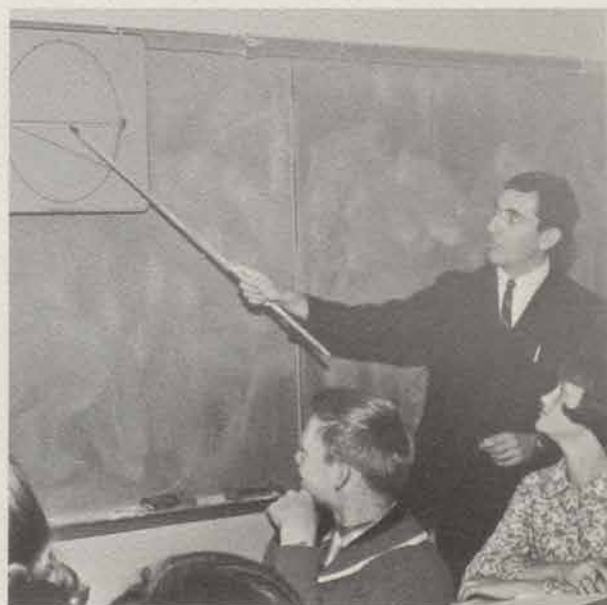

On foundations built by Pythagoras, Descartes, and Euclid, the mathematics classes continued to advance to a goal of greater understanding of principles in math. Taught by Mr. Harrell and Mr. Wilson, general math students reviewed arithmetic and studied various kinds of graphs. Consideration of problems pertaining to family income and community activities developed the students' practical mathematical skills.

Mr. Dougan and Mr. Imel instilled Algebra I students with knowledge of set theory, signed numbers, equations, and inequalities. In Algebra III, Mr. Wilson and Mr. Imel emphasized equations in three unknowns, the theory of quadratic equations, the binomial theorem, and logarithms.

Students in Mr. Buckle's, Mr. Dougan's, and Mr. Dunkerton's geometry classes used a variety of geometric figures in their study of lines, angles, triangles, parallel and perpendicular lines, circles, and arcs. Seniors taking advanced mathematics investigated trigonometry, analytic geometry, calculus, and statistics.

stimulates the student exploring new frontiers

The science department faculty took on a new appearance this year with the advents of Mr. Imel, Mr. Yarber, Mr. Turpin, Mr. Keach, and Mr. Miller. The new instructors taught in the fields of physics, chemistry, biology, and earth science.

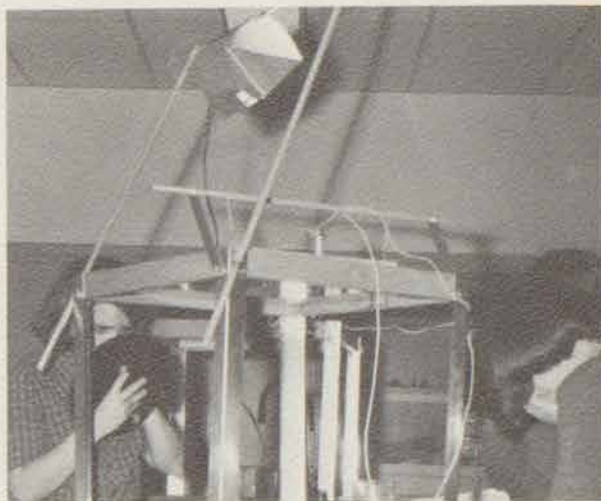

Physics students studied the behavior of matter and energy with regard to thickness of molecules, wave action, periodicity, and wave lengths.

Besides learning about the uses of matter and the change it undergoes, chemistry students studied atomic structure. Laboratory experiments helped explain the chemical properties of matter.

Students dissected worms, frogs, and pigs in biology classes to observe anatomical features. Several students traveled to grade schools in the area to instruct children in science projects.

Earth science learners sought to become more familiar with their natural surroundings through field trips.

ANIMAL DISSECTION is a part of the biology curriculum. Mike Howell and Kenny Watson prepare to dissect a baby pig.

REFLECTIONS OF WAVES are seen through generated water in a ripple tank and are then measured for wave lengths. Kathy Osbourn observes the reflections through the stroboscope.

COMME C'EST UNE CLASSE INTELLIGENTE!! (What an intelligent class!!) Due to the limited number of students, third and fourth-year French classes met together. Mrs. Willis is shown teaching the fourth-year students, Medora Ridder, Rodger Bur-

civilizations help improve world harmony

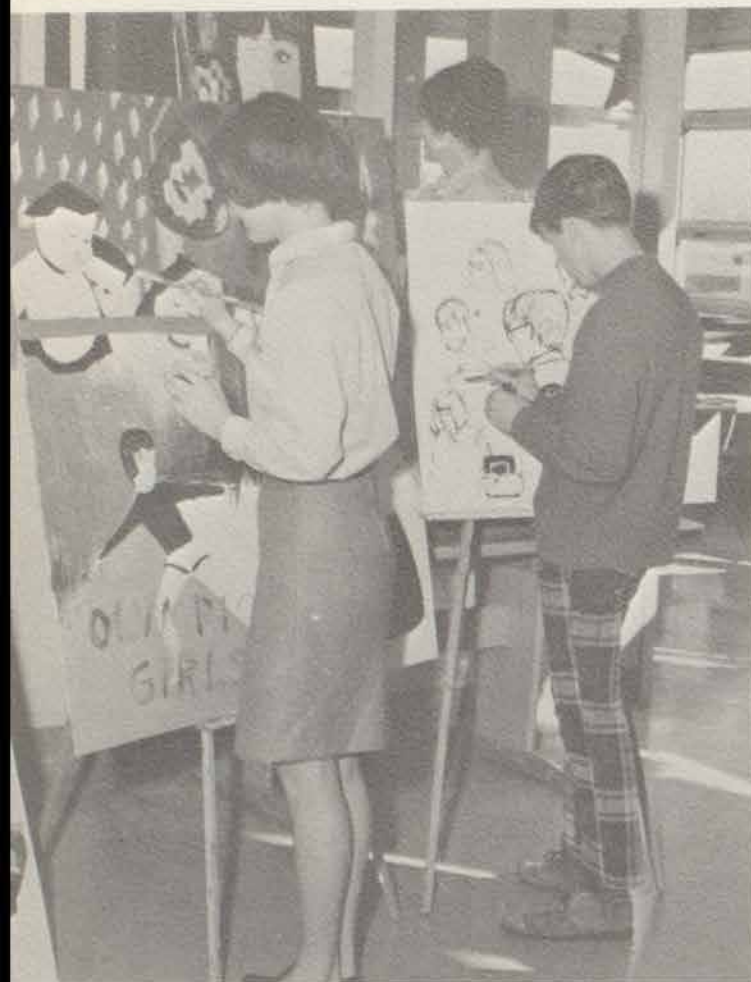

CICERO ERAT MAGNUSI (Cicero was great!) Latin students Patty Perway, Betsy Graham, and Glenda France built a life-size statue of Cicero as their Latin class project.

Mrs. Willis was appointed as the first language department chairman of Madison High School. Other innovations consisted of new fourth-year French and Spanish classes and third-year Latin class which extended the studies of foreign cultures and civilizations.

Several new teachers joined the language department this year. They included Mr. Keach in the German department and Miss Creech and Dr. Walling in the Spanish department. Since Dr. Walling is an immigrant from Cuba, his students profited greatly from his instruction and personal experiences.

Latin students continued their studies under the direction of Mrs. Moore and Mrs. Wood. Although Latin is non-existent as a spoken language, it is still very important as a basis for the romance languages.

The language lab also played a vital part in the teaching of languages. It offered the students the opportunity to hear foreign languages spoken by natives of the foreign countries and it also provided a chance to practice proper pronunciation.

BRUSHES, PAINTS, PENS, AND INK are among the media of art compositions. Displaying some of the techniques are Karen Mason, Linda Williams, and Gene Sizemore.

Art students at Madison materialized their interpretations of MCHS and the Madison community by molding with clay, constructing with cardboard, sketching, and painting with water colors, ink, and acrylic and tempera paints. Mr. Chapman and Mr. Combs in the beginning and intermediate classes, and Mr. Knoble in the advanced classes, combined actual construction with art history and field trips to study methods of painting, sculpture, and architecture.

Art students displayed their works on school bulletin boards and on the walls. At Historic Madison, Bob Sexton won first place in an art contest sponsored by the Women's Club.

In the music department, the addition of music theory to the curriculum made it possible to have a music major. Theory students played scales, learned to identify chords and intervals by ear, and studied forms of music composition.

In band and choral club, musicians studied, practiced, and performed contemporary serious music as well as standard composition. Both groups were involved in performances at routine and unusual civic and school events.

Practice advances competence in business

The peck-peck-peck and ring of typewriters, the clatter of adding machines, and the hasty solitude of shorthand notetaking typified the ever-moving commercial department of MCHS this year. Students, many of them future business men and women, coupled a command of fundamentals with speed, efficiency and accuracy.

Beginners' typing courses were designed to instill a knowledge of good typing techniques according to the touch system of typing. This course emphasized term papers, outlines, and other typed works required in school. Second-year students demonstrated proficiency in different categories of office typing.

Proper transcription and interpretation were the mode for first and second-year shorthand students. Students memorized brief symbols and business phrases. Competency emerged as a desirable goal to the trainees as they learned to take more difficult dictation.

Bookkeeping apprentices indexed and computed their way through several phases of record-keeping. Furthermore, they punched and otherwise learned to operate adding machines, calculators, duplicators, and transcription devices.

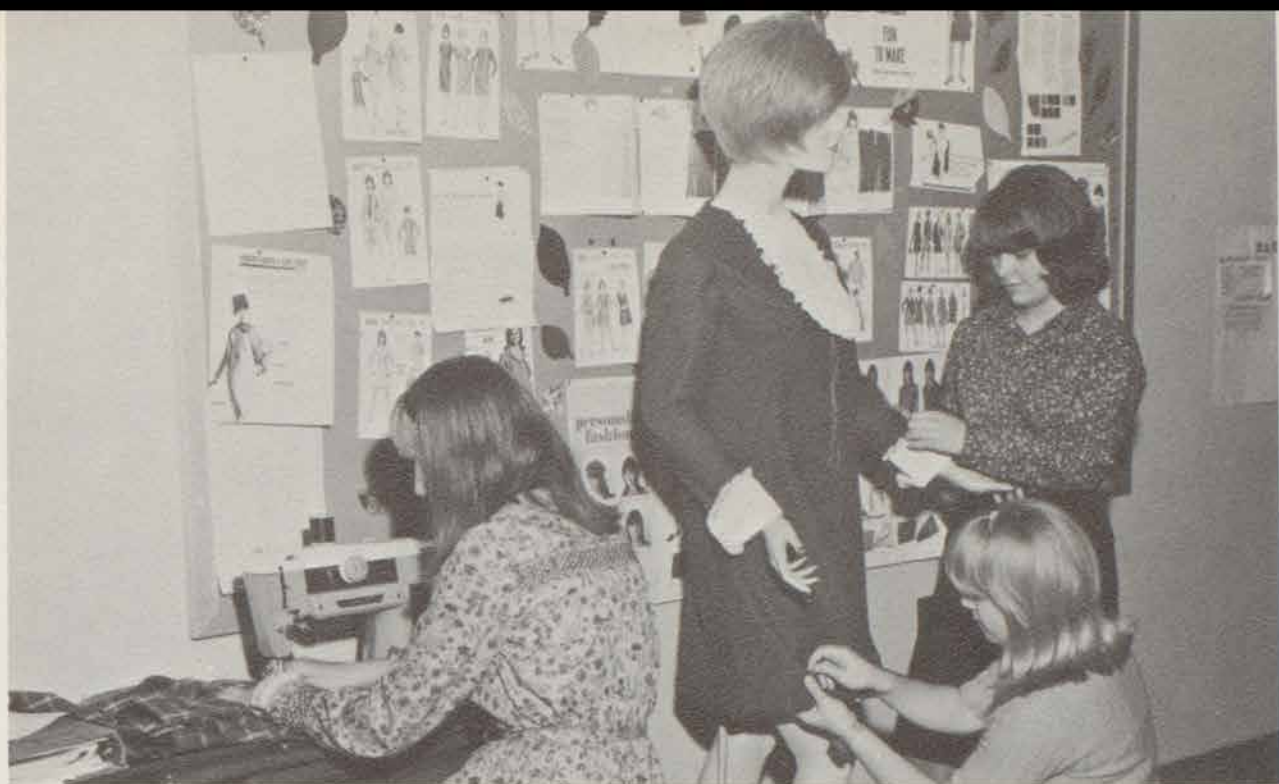

F J F; F J F is one of the many exercises designed to teach the students the correct way to type by touch. Mrs. Davis is timing the students as they strive to increase their typing speed.

PROFITS, BALANCES, AND DEFICITS pose problems for the fifth period business machine class. Mrs. Ford, student teacher from Indiana University, observes Jeanie Long's work with the adding machine. Connie Niccum and Diane Tullis discuss one of the budget problems.

DICTATION, TRANSCRIPTION, AND SPELLING build the student's accuracy and speed in Mrs. Wynn's first period shorthand class. Here students practice taking dictation at 50 words per minute.

Girls gain proficiency in homemaking arts

Students enrolled in home economics courses faced many challenges in the 1966-1967 school year. The course dealt not only with foods and textiles, but also with a variety of closely related topics which complemented basic studies.

Learning to care for the sick and elderly, studying aspects of personal hygiene and grooming, and acquiring knowledge of the management of time and money enabled students to explore the vocation of homemaking and prepared them for living in a fast-moving society.

Industrial arts courses such as woodworking, general shop, auto mechanics, general metals, and mechanical drawing stressed such things as design, the use of power and hand tools, concrete construction, welding, and metal working. MCHS industrial art students constructed gunracks and skate boards, loosened and tightened parts of engines and motors, and re-finished the old Miss Madison. In general, they learned by changing the pattern, the size, the mechanics, and the shape of things.

Field trips to industries in the Kentuckiana area supplemented shop and classroom teaching through the study of contemporary manufacturing methods. Also, the acquisition of six new electric and four oxyacetylene welding machines made possible six additional weeks of welding.

Mechanical repair is vital to agriculture

The Agriculture-Related Occupation Program combined with the more conventional courses this year to produce a fuller farming curriculum.

The latest program, new in Indiana, was introduced in Jefferson County last fall. Four students from Madison High, under the direction of Mr. Harmon, spent a total of five hours in class each week and an additional ten hours per week in on-the-job training in different aspects of farming at Irwin Farmers' Store. Mr. Harmon taught the third-period class here and commuted to Southwestern High School, where he conducted another session. Enlargement of the class next fall testifies to the initial popularity of the new course.

The new agricultural class complemented and extended the scope of Mr. Spicer's farming courses, emphasizing farm equipment sales and service.

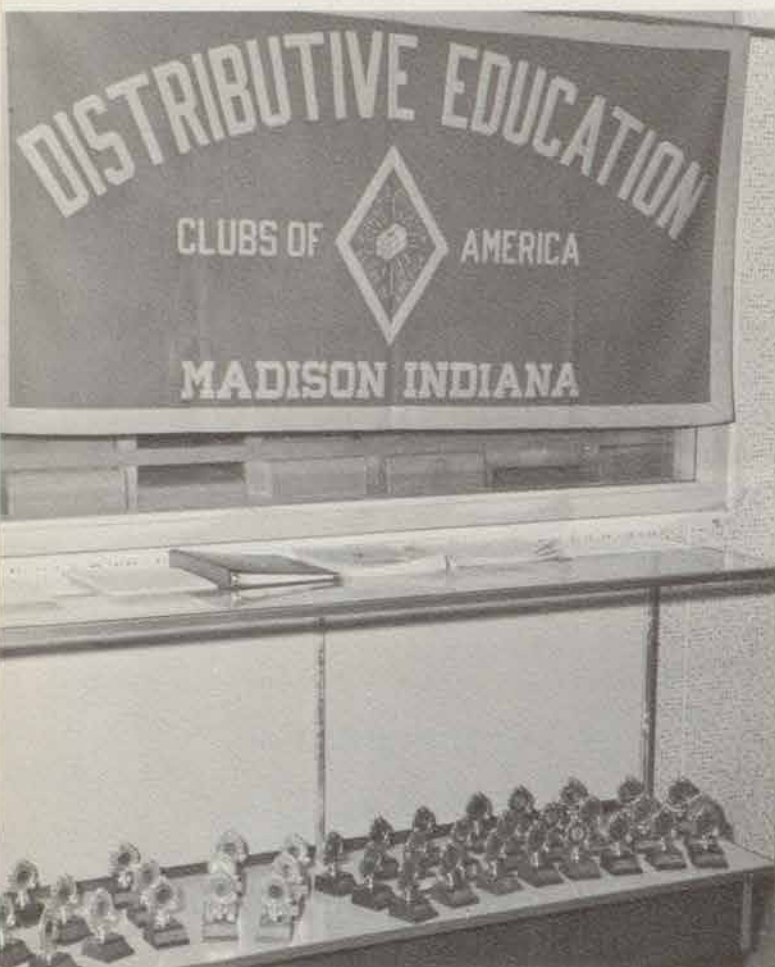

TRACTOR MAINTENANCE is part of Mr. Spicer's third-hour vocational agricultural course. Pistons, valves, spark plugs, cylinders, and fan belts challenge the curious student.

Practical training develops vocational skills

Distributive Education, a relatively new course, received greater emphasis this year. In an expanding program, planned working arrangements were co-ordinated with classroom study relating to the distributive occupations. One essential characteristic was mutual planning between the school and employer.

With Mr. Smith as teacher-co-ordinator, each senior student benefited from classroom instruction pertaining to his particular work in the local co-operating business organizations. To improve efficiency, each employer supervised on-the-job training for the students. They acquired sales ability, job intelligence, technical knowledge, and occupational orientation to the business world.

Girl's physical education classes, which stressed individual sports, and boy's physical education classes, which promoted team sports and cooperation, helped the students to be more physically fit.

For the girls, the schedule of activities last year teamed with vigorous sports such as tumbling, basketball, archery, volleyball, calisthenics, modern dancing, dodge ball, bowling and tennis. These sports helped to build coordination and confidence.

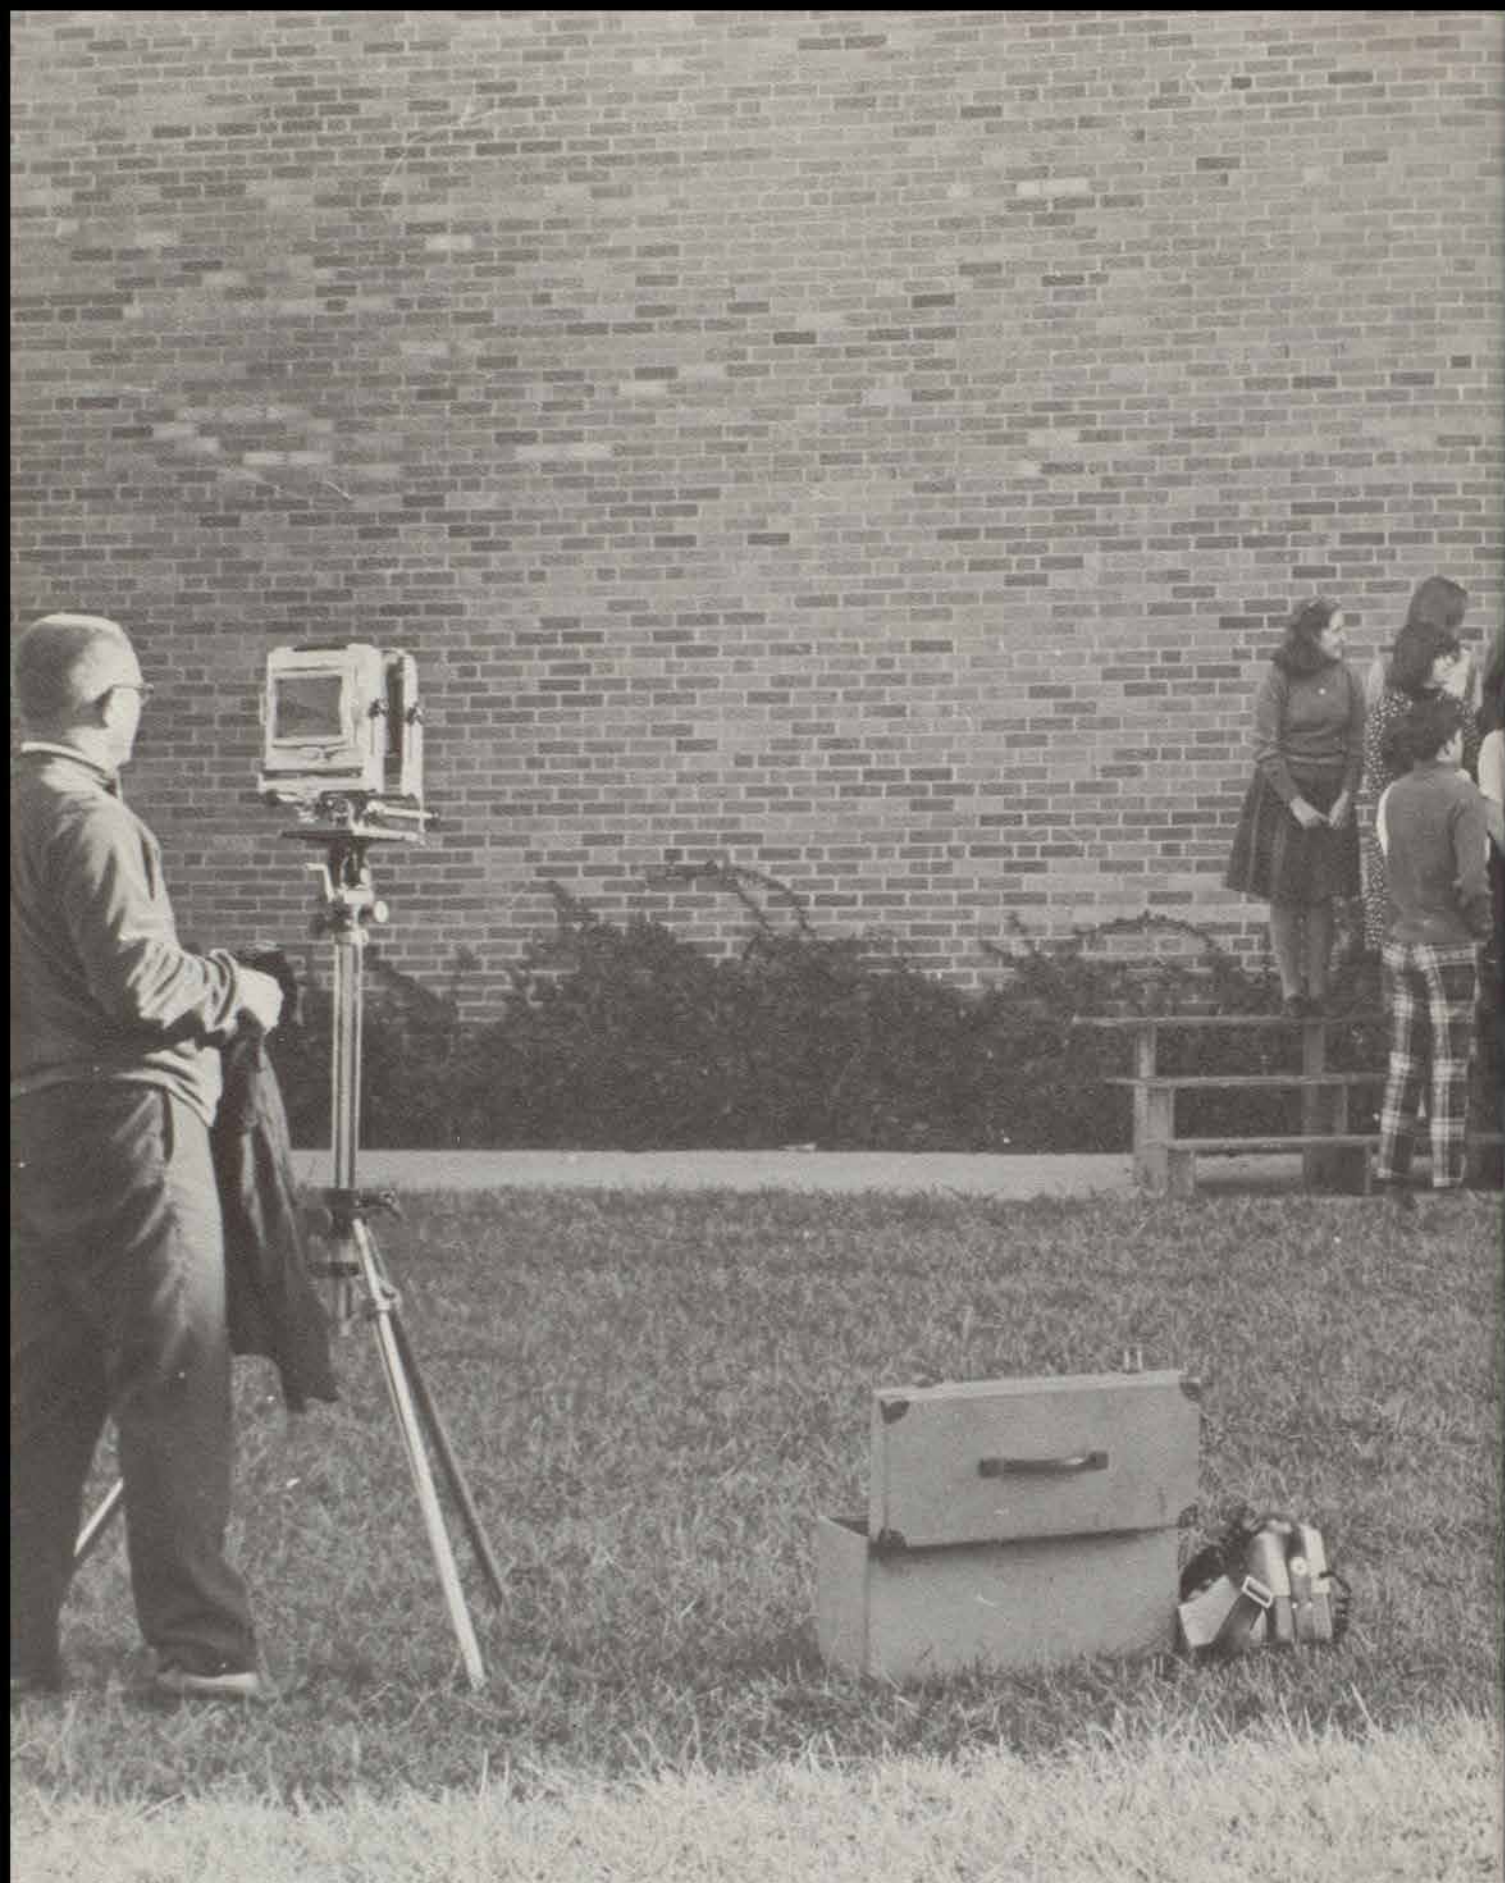

The activities for the boys included basketball, volleyball, football, softball, calisthenics, and tennis. These sports developed team spirit among members.

ORGANIZATIONS

MCHS organizations altered the high school and community profile. Madison High groups distributed Christmas baskets, financed scholarships, made material contributions to the school, and performed various services for the administration.

Yet these groups were more than mere service organizations. Clubs provided members with definite group and personality goals. More importantly, the projects demanded a deep sense of responsibility from the members. This section, then, is devoted to the co-curricular side of MCHS life—our clubs.

Thespian Society enacts stage productions

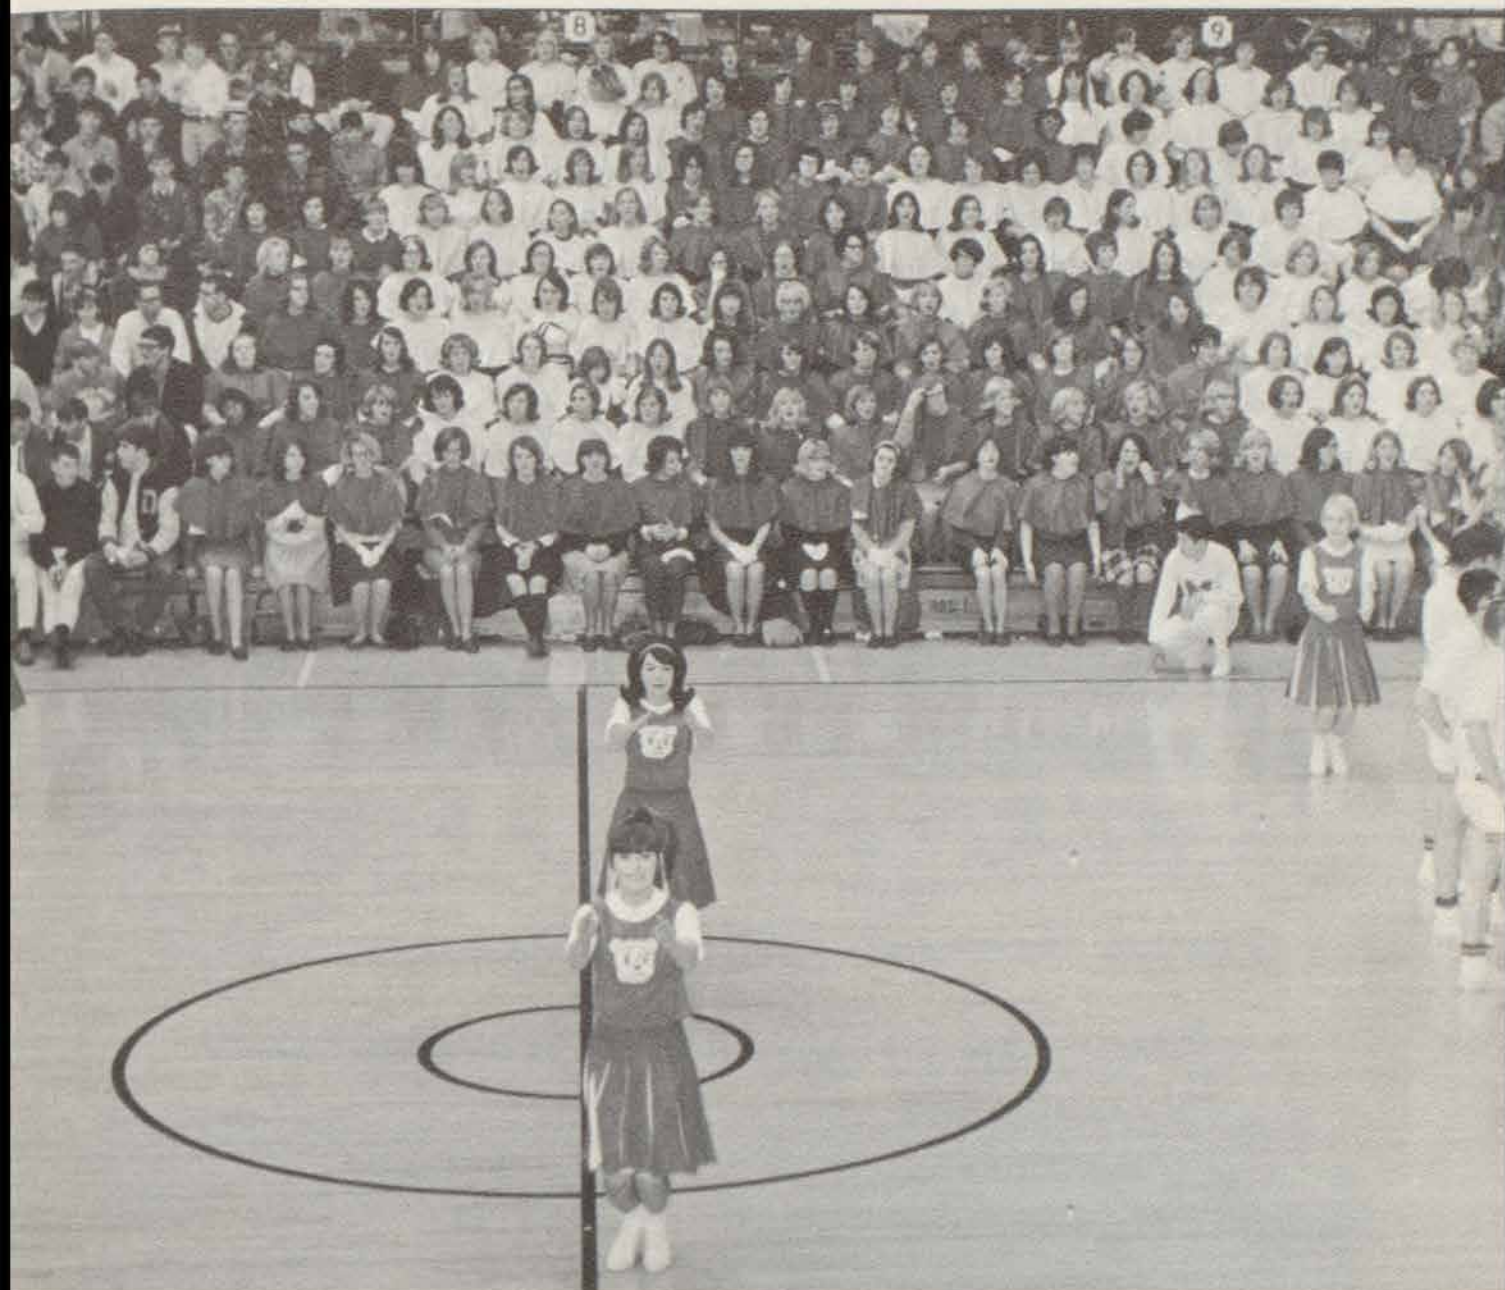

The Thespian Society is an honorary organization in the sense that members gain recognition for having met certain standards and membership requirements. During meetings members helped each other understand drama by presenting instructive programs consisting of skits,

The annual spring initiation and banquet honoring the senior members highlighted the year's activities. Thespians dressed semi-formally for the candlelight ceremony held in the spring.

Contagious enthusiasm of MCHS Cheerblock penetrates avid and spirited Cub fans

Pep Club girls, who sported red capes and white gloves, added color and spirit to the games. The cheerblock, sponsored by Miss Eisenhardt, practiced every Friday.

Two changes came to the MCHS cheerblock this past year. Members worked to make the Pep Club more of a club by electing officers.

The officers were as follows: Jackie Long, president; Miriam Moy, vice-president; Carolyn Hilterbran, secretary; and Terry Jones, treasurer.

The second change was the "Spirit Stick." Each week the stick was given to the class showing the most vigorous spirit, which introduced competition among the classes.

Future Teachers investigate careers

Working under a new constitution, the Madison Future Teachers of America featured speakers, panel discussions, and programs concerning phases of teaching. Money-making ventures included selling Cub pennants and sponsoring an after game sock-hop. The proceeds from these projects went into a scholarship fund.

Members of the Future Farmers of America employed their practical knowledge gained through vocational agriculture classes in group work.

Under the sponsorship of Mr. Spicer, the Future Farmers participated in quality contests with clubs from neighbor schools. The judging covered

During Farm-City Week the FFA initiated a tobacco show at Morrow Tobacco Warehouse. In the spring the Madison chapter hosted an awards banquet for FFA members of District 12.

Industrial Arts Club builds new skills

Interest in the Industrial Arts Club was spurred on by visits to various corporations. The club, re-instituted after a lapse of less than ten years, boasted a membership of seventy-eight, making it one of the largest clubs in the school. Creating interest in the branches of industrial training was one of the main objectives of the club.

In addition to visits to local companies such as Grote, Conn Organ, Rex Chainbelt, Rotary Lift, Williamson Heater, and the IKEC plant, the members participated in a trip to Louisville, to the Ford Motor Company and one to Jeffersonville to tour the Colgate-Palmolive plant. Tentative plans included a visit to the vocational school at Versailles and a two-day trip to Evansville.

Funds for a formal spring dinner were raised through a candy sale. Members and their fathers, as well as representatives of surrounding industries attended the dinner.

Honor Society recognizes scholastic ability

National Honor Society, composed of juniors and seniors chosen for membership on the basis of scholastic achievement and leadership, suggested methods for improving the curriculum and daily routine of the school. At an early meeting a committee explored the history of the National Honor Society.

Mr. Thompson spoke to the members concerning what he felt the role of the club should be. During the December meeting, a panel of student teachers discussed with members the transition from high school to college and the change in daily schedule that it entails.

Photographers capture MCHS highlights

The MCHS Photography Club recorded change in the community visually, through film. Sponsored by Mr. Miller, the group snapped pictures of scenes in the school and city. As in past years, the club was in charge of picture-taking for the COMP CLASSICS, and, in part, for the MAHISCO. Also the organization assumed a new duty, the job of taking pictures for the MADISONIAN.

Photography Club plans included evening meetings to improve the understanding of the photographic process and to encourage individual abilities, and a field trip to the MADISON COURIER, in addition to their practical commitments.

Future Homemakers broaden home horizons

The 34-member FHA Club marked the twenty-first birthday of the national organization. In addition to sponsoring the annual Miss Cub coronation in February, the group established five programs coordinated with themes suggested by the national foundation to better members and their communities.

Choral Club combines classic with modern

Novel all-school hootenannies and a new instructor broadened the choral ensemble's program this year. In addition to the regular schedule of appearances at Thanksgiving and Christmas assemblies, the Valley Choral Festival, and the spring concert, Miss Laughlin's young vocalists initiated a drive to elicit student participation in the form of folksinging before the students during homerooms.

The three subdivisions of the choral group—the Sextet, the Triple Trio, and the Sweet Sixteen—performed at concerts, community programs, and the Music Parents' Christmas open house.

Knitting Club unravels new yarns

Sponsored by Miss Horn, the Knitting Club marked its fourth year. New members learned basic stitches and knitted house shoes, scarves, and sleeveless sweaters. The advanced members worked with more difficult aspects such as cabling, ribbing, and monogramming. They produced sweaters, afghans, and mittens with design stitches.

Majorettes and Drum Major lead band

Besides their regular twirling routines, the majorettes donned kilts and tams and danced the Highland Fling during marching season. In a pre-game routine at the Bloomington basketball game, the girls became "The Cub Trotters," manipulating basketballs to the tune of "Sweet Georgia Brown." They used paste pompons in performing the cancan, red and white pompons during the school song, and flags in flag drills.

Drum major Tom Woodburn completed his third year as drum major. Besides his duties of giving signals and keeping order, he also instructed next year's drum major, Sally Renne.

HIGHSTEPPING ACTION characterizes the performance of the majorettes and drum major, Connie Niccum, Linda Sherwood, Mary Ann Wolf, Tom Woodburn (drum major), Candy Combs, and Katie Johnson.

Marching Cubs display precision drills

BOB CANIDA is measured for his senior blazer by Mr. Dwight Mills.

As an important element of Madison and MCHS, the Marching Cubs and concert band events. Early in the school year the marching band performed in the Regatta Parade, joined over ninety other bands at IU Band Day at Indiana University, and displayed precision marching in football halftime routines.

During the basketball season, the band entertained spectators with pre-game and half-time music. Early in February, soloists and ensembles from the band performed in the Indiana Solo and Ensemble Concert at Hanover. This year the band was extended an invitation to march at the Kentucky Derby.

Activity bands provide pep and music

Madison's dance band was perhaps the first high school group in this region to perform live on color television. The musicians appeared on WAVE TV's "Morning Show" last fall. In November, dance band music paced festivities for Farm-City Week in the gymnasium and opening sales at Morrow Tobacco Warehouse. In the spring the group competed in the Indiana Solo and Ensemble contest, and made a video tape for "Hi Varieties" on WHAS TV.

Our pep band charged the air at pep sessions. The group triggered spirit at the homecoming bonfire and set the tone for last fall's United Fund kickoff ceremonies.

MCHS' Lettermen's Club bridged the gap between the high school and the community of Madison. The club zeroed in on the aims of giving more and better publicity to past and present lettermen.

Accumulated funds were earmarked for a scholarship for the outstanding senior athlete of MCHS, which was awarded on Senior Honor Day.

Athletes encourage all fields of sports

A deeper involvement in the worldwide Christian community embodied the ambition of one of MCHS' newest organizations, the Fellowship of Christian Athletes. The club held its organizational meeting December 11 in the cafeteria. The Reverend Bob Richardson spoke in absentia by means of a tape recording to the group.

Sunshine binds school and community

One of the largest clubs in our school, the Sunshine Society, sponsored by Mrs. Cook, crowded the 1966-67 school year with numerous projects.

Distributing Thanksgiving and Christmas baskets not only brought joy to the families but also to the girls who participated. By working at the football and basketball concession stands, the girls obtained the money needed to provide these baskets.

To further the spirit of giving, MCHS Sunshiners make a yearly contribution to the Riley Hospital located in Indianapolis.

All chapters in the state of Indiana convene annually. This year, the North Manchester chapter hosted the Sunshine State Convention.

Debaters troop to northern tournaments

Traveling to tournaments at Terre Haute, Lafayette, Jeff, Ben Davis, Logansport, Muncie Central, Converse, and Ball State University, the debate team expanded its activities. With a new coach and the use of "Cross-X" debating, the team joined the Indiana High School Forensic Association and competed in the state sectional.

Debaters got up at 4:00 A.M. to attend conferences at Butler, Indiana, and Perdue universities. They did receive some awards in competition. Later, debaters prepared for next year's topic and the debate course, which will be open to sophomores, juniors, and seniors.

Students aid teachers in lab exercises

Being a lab assistant requires various skills. DECA and BLAST mold business leaders

Individual and group initiative characterized DECA's third year at MCHS. DECA held a faculty tea, prepared Christmas and Thanksgiving baskets, and hosted a regional Distributive Education Contest. For on-the-job training students, the club also planned an employer-employee banquet to show its appreciation to local businessmen.

BLAST, consisting of juniors and seniors in business courses, related club activities to training in these courses. The club was sponsored by Mrs. Wynn and Mrs. Wheeler.

During December members collected food for the needy. Later the club traveled to Louisville to visit businesses. A senior banquet concluded the year's activities.

Local Hi-Y chapter captures state offices

For the first time in the history of Madison's Hi-Y, the chapter provided two state officers. As state president, Greg Scott presided at the summer camp and at the model legislature at Indianapolis with Gary Denning, state chaplain.

Greg represented Indiana as a youth observer at a national meeting of the YMCA World Service Commission at Washington, D.C. He also attended the national YMCA United Nations and World Affairs Seminar at New York City.

Within the community the Hi-Y members crowned a Sweetheart at the annual dance, supplied Christmas baskets to needy families, arranged the Chain of Missions assembly, and presented the Easter assembly.

Science Club relates past to future

MCCHS' Science Club undertook several novel projects this year. Mr. Turpin and Mr. Dunkerton guided the members in outfitting a time capsule. Elements placed in the unit were chosen as reflections of our diverse culture. The capsule was buried on the school grounds and is scheduled to be unearthed in fifty years.

Science club members further explored the realms of science through experiments with cancer injections in rats and the isolation of DNA. In the second semester the group instituted monthly seminars which featured visiting industrial scientists and college professors.

Spanish Club formulates constitution

Emphasis given to topics that would be of interest to Spanish students is the main purpose of the Spanish Club. The topics included Spanish parties and guest speakers who had studied or visited Spanish-speaking countries. With a new sponsor, Miss Creech, the members attempted new projects. One such project was the acting out of the story "Little Red Riding Hood."

The completion of a constitution was also an added attraction. By drawing up this document, the club outlined plans for meeting and established rules for keeping order. At meetings, members were able to converse in Spanish, thus putting their knowledge of the language to practical use.

Council promotes student leadership

Working to broaden the scope of its activities, the Student Council discussed, planned, and initiated ideas. Besides sponsoring Homecoming, and serving as guides for Open House and College Night, members operated a concession stand at football games, composed a code of ethics for the student body, and worked to ease the confusion in the lunch lines. Also they sponsored an after-game sock hop and raised money for a scholarship for an outgoing senior.

Discussion at council meetings centered around improving the image of the school and encouraging greater involvement.

School publications inform students

MADISONIAN staffers chronicled change in both school and community news, as well as presenting other original writing each month.

The apprentice journalists delved into the subject at the outset of the school year—the first publication date came three weeks after school began. Guided by sponsor Mrs. Adler, the students developed a familiarity with basic elements of newswriting, page layout, and advertising. Following the initial publication, they branched out and studied changing styles and methods in basic writing as well as appealing layout.

MADISONIAN EDITORIAL BOARD: T. Akers (reporter), M. Alcorn (news co-ed.), S. Hargesheimer (activities co-ed.), T. Lodge (bus. mgr.), P. Butler (sports ed.), J. McKay (activities co-ed.),

M. Fultz (feature ed.), Mrs. Adler (sponsor), L. Sherwood (news co-ed.), D. Stutler (ed.-in-chief).

A classified ads column complemented the customary advertising. A new type style, Caslon, improved page appearance, and folio or date lines were set in the upper outside corners of the pages. "Senior Spotlight," a monthly feature, combined with the other regular articles to increase the appeal of the MADISONIAN to readers.

Editor Donna Stutler and Business Manager Terry Lodge acted as guides representing MCHS for tours through the MADISON COURIER offset printing plant during Farm-City Week. Also, area editors took on heavier responsibilities because of the absence of an official assistant editor, contrasting to past years.

LINDA SHERWOOD AND PAUL BUTLER put the finishing touches on paste-up, one of the worst jobs in the making of the MADISONIAN.

1967 was a year of change for the MAHISCO. A monks cloth cover, more pages of color, an all-school index, and alterations in staff operation contributed to yearbook modernization. In addition, staff members performed a skit at the Thanksgiving assembly to promote the book and boost circulation.

The staff met as a regular class during the fourth period. Innovations in copy, page layout and advertising were stressed as the annual writers strived to match the A rating received by the '66 MAHISCO. Also, staff members sought to retain the quality and high standards set in recent years.

GAA develops sportsmanship and skills

To promote physical fitness and better sportsmanship, Miss Eisenhardt planned diverse activities for members of the Girls' Athletic Association.

Throughout the year, various officers and members attended camps to gain experience in leadership and to acquire new ideas for sports and projects. Playdays held at different schools provided competition among clubs.

By selling holiday packs, Cub booster pins, and sweatshirts, the club earned money for various awards. Awards included pins, letters, and plaques which were presented at the conclusion of the year to girls who had earned points for organized and independent sports.

Parking lot institutes Safety Council

Initiated to promote safe driving practices and greater student responsibility, the Madison Teenage Safety Council helped to formulate the rules governing student driving. However, the council concerned itself not only with school-related problems, but with all aspects of safety.

Selected from the ranks of junior and senior drivers, council members worked to establish restricted areas in the parking lot for those students who wanted no one near their cars during the day. Council members handed out tickets to students parked in wrong areas and to those whose cars lacked school parking permit stickers.

Office assistants gained practical experience as they gave up study hall time to help others. Their aid to the administration furthered efficiency in office transactions. These students ran errands, typed, collected absence cards, and sold lunch tickets at noon.

Learning by serving was the main objective for the library assistants. In addition to checking out books and preparing new volumes for use, the student librarians aided Mrs. Cook, Mrs. Reed, and Mrs. Lockard by locating books and returning the passes to study hall.

Energetic students who typed, graded papers, and helped to assemble lab equipment demonstrated that the science lab assistants were busily at work. These selected aides were required to have excelled in previous science courses, and their duties ranged from washing dishes to monitoring a class during a test.

For the many hours surrendered by the thirteen students in the 1966-67 school year, one credit toward graduation was received. They also enjoyed helping others, and in the process, they gained valuable experience.

The bookstore assistants were the dispensers of materials for learning at MCHS. The four volunteers devoted hours of time and effort each week to selling paperbacks, pens, pencils, ink, and various other school supplies. The assistants kept the machinery of study at MCHS well-lubricated.

SPORTS

Perhaps nowhere is change more evident than in sports. The steady lapse of time on scoreboards, the bouncing of balls against backboards and bats, the contact of bodies on mats, the pounding of racing feet against cinders, all provide graphic illustrations of change.

Each year there are new players, new records, and new rules. The often fast-changing tide of battle and the attraction of the roar of the crowd all enhance the appeal of the games of glory—athletics.

Fighting Cubs plagued with hard luck

Madison's football Cubs, guided by new head coach Roger Gallatin, finished with a 1-7 season this year.

Though compiling a losing record, the Cubs beat their opponents in rushing, passing, and first downs. Their only victory came at West Washington with a 26-20 score. The Cubs lost many close games and finished strong against North Vernon, a tough rival. Snow cancelled the final game at Clarksville.

Danny Smith and Terry Lodge were named offensive standouts. Dennis Reed was the most valuable back. Seniors Mike Stephens and Terry Wells were selected as best defensive players.

Frosh learn high school sports techniques

The freshman football team closed the longest season in its history with a 1-5-1 record. The frosh gridders started strong, grabbing a victory over Greensburg and a tie with Aurora. However, Coach Purkhiser lost nine players through scholastic ineligibility and the young Cubs failed to secure a win after that event.

The freshman basketball team improved in basic fundamentals while compiling a 7-11 slate. Important victories were recorded over North Vernon, Shawe, Southwestern, and Austin, plus two wins in the Shawe Tournament for a second-place finish. Outstanding performers for the team were Bill Watson and Wayne Richey, with 9.3 and 7.3 point scoring averages respectively.

The 1966-67 basketball Cubs finished with a sound 21-4 record. Important victories were recorded over Brookville and North Vernon as the Cubs won their own invitational tourney. The Cubs also conquered strong foes Jeffersonville, New Albany, Shelbyville, and Bloomington. In the sectional, the Cubs downed Shawe and New Washington easily before a close win over Silver Creek. The team finished in the regional with a victory over Whiteland, followed by a one point loss suffered at the hands of Greensburg.

Willie Humes set a new individual scoring record of 53 points against Lawrenceburg, breaking his old mark of 49 points, to finish second in all-time four-year scoring. Willie concluded his career with a total of 1,876 points for an average of 21.07 points per game. For this year he averaged 26.9 and hauled in 255 rebounds.

Bob Leisure complemented Willie with a 12.1 point average, Kenny Humes had 11.6, Tony Klein totaled 10.3, John Eckert had 4.3, Joe Perry had 5.8, and Merritt Alcorn finished with a 3.2 point scoring average. The only starting underclassman, Mike Robinson, had a 7.3 average. Danny Smith sported a 1.4 output per game before being sidelined by illness.

Matmen retain poise despite poor season

Following its undefeated 1966 season, Madison experienced a disappointing rebuilding season, compiling a record of no wins and nine losses.

Under the direction of coaches Darryl Smith and Vernon Howard, the Cubs showed marked improvement as the season progressed. The team, dominated by underclassmen, dropped close matches to North Vernon and Jeffersonville.

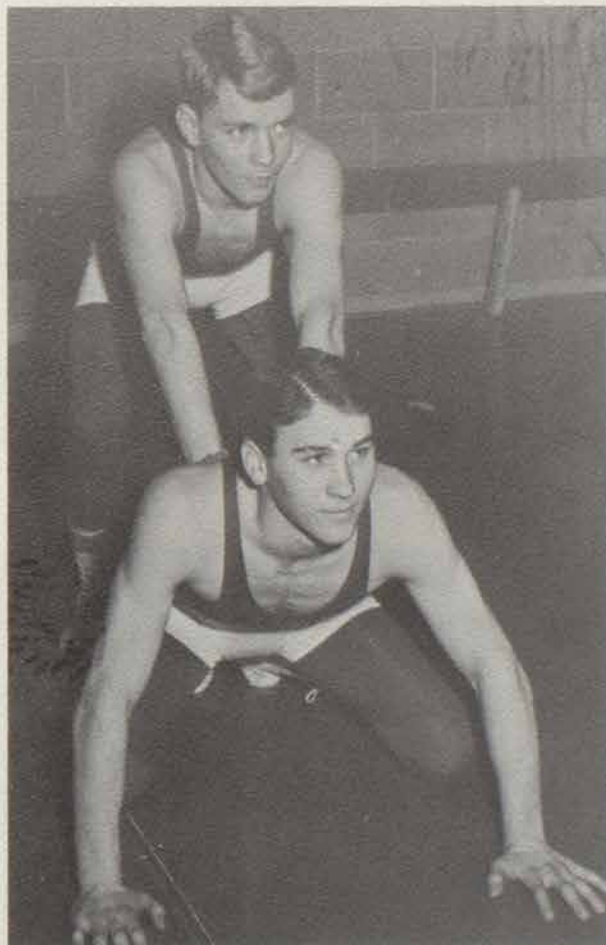

"Moto's Men" grappled to a third-place finish in the Brookville Invitational Tournament. In post season action the Cubs finished seventh in the Bloomington Sectional.

Larry Lockridge, Gerald Risk, and Bob Center were outstanding performers this season. Lockridge lost only one match during the regular season before a third-place finish in the sectional. Risk finished highest in the sectional with a second in the 133-pound class. Center was undefeated until a leg injury sidelined him for the campaign. Both Lockridge and Center will return next year.

Roines dominates intramurals

This season, under the direction of Mr. Dunkerton, intramural sports were dominated by strong Roines teams who captured league titles in flag football as well as basketball. The teachers won the volleyball championship.

In flag football competition, Roines met the C-men, a mixture of juniors and seniors, and defeated them by one touchdown.

The volleyball competition was unusual in that the teachers fielded a team of their own. The teachers did, of course, win, defeating a team of strong sophomores in the final game.

The culmination of the intramural program came with basketball. Roines finished in a tie for first place during the regular season with the Blue Devils providing their only defeat. In the tourney, Roines beat the Zephrons three straight games, winning the championship by a score of 35-14.

Maintaining a three year home winning streak until the final meet of the season, the Madison track team emerged from the 1967 season with an 8-2 record. The Cubs, who blasted several teams, failed to win only two triangular meets, placing second to Jeffersonville and Columbus.

Vaulting to 11'7 1/2" at Batesville, Jeff Matheney set a new pole vault mark. Gary Denning set a new two mile run mark, 10:09.1 at Clarksville. Part of Madison's success was due to the depth provided by such runners as Jeff Cosby, Randy Lykins, Gary Denning, Louis Humes, and others. However, in spite of the season's record, Madison failed to qualify a runner for the regional.

ALBUM

The face that the Madison High student turns to the world is molded by hundreds of factors. Student and administration likes, dislikes, achievements, conflicts, and tastes, form the image of the Madison teenager. There is not a nondescript mass of students at MCHS. Rather, there are 1071 different personalities, each struggling in his own way for success, guidance, and acceptance as he prepares to face the ever-approaching world of tomorrow. This book is a story of that struggle—this section, a glimpse at the characters.

Administration pilots school activities

We are again presented with a word and picture account of the many happenings of and about Madison Consolidated High School for the 1966-67 school year. This is a valuable book and should be highly treasured. The staff and sponsor have devoted many hours of their time to give you the best yearbook yet produced at MCHS. Not only the accounts of actual events, but the implications of the events and the relationship they bring to mind are of future value. We find that the older the yearbook, the greater its value to each of us. As we leaf through this book many years in the future, we will be surprised at the many memories its brings. It is always surprising to study these books, and wonder if all the events and activities described actually took place in such a short time, particularly since it is possible to cover only a small percent of the many worthy events that happened.

I very highly commend the sponsor and staff of the 1967 Mahisco for their dedication to providing us with an excellent review of the "MCHS Happenings—1967 Style." It is a valuable treasure of a fine school and community.

SCHOOL BOARD MEMBERS: Gavin Lodge, John Reed, Bud Scott, Supt. George Cook, Lloyd Miller, Carl Strohm, Thelma Storm, Glenn Waltz, and John Cooke. Brooklyn Cull is not pictured.

Many of the things we did in and around Madison High this year were connected, at least indirectly, with the Madison Consolidated School System Board of Education.

This group of seven men sets policy for general academic and moral procedures in all schools and is directly involved with plans for forthcoming additions to MCHS. Patterns of teaching and basic course layout are under the sponsorship of this board, and the men set minimum academic requirements for the 4,000 students in the system.

Traditionally, education has been measured by the number of years a student spends in school studying the three R's. Is this truly education, or is education the total growth of the individual, mentally, morally, and socially?

To the Seniors. For many of you this may be the end of your formal education. For others it is the completion of the first hurdle. Whatever your plans may be, remember that your education continues outside the classroom.

To the Juniors. You have almost reached the top level of your high school education. I hope you feel that you have much to do in your last year. What you put into your remaining time in high school will determine what you take with you into your adult life. You have time, but not a great deal of time.

To the Sophomores. This is really a great time—not much to worry about, but time to start thinking seriously about where you are heading. What must you do to make your life a success? What things are really important in your life?

To the Freshmen. You are the most fortunate of all students. You have the opportunity to benefit from our mistakes and our successes. The decisions you make will be most important in your future. You are the future of our country.

MCHS' three counselors offered students a variety of free services this year. In addition to the commonly accepted tasks of preparing class schedules for some 1,000 students and meting out tardy and absence slips, the advisors also loaned out books and pamphlets of college and vocational information, and supervised testing programs. In a more personal vein, the counselors heard and considered student problems and grievances.

Cooks, custodians, aides, and secretaries

TEACHERS' AIDES Mrs. Reed and Mrs. Paul save faculty members many steps.

The MCHS secretaries served as necessary and vital parts of the educational process. Keeping records, validating passes, handling communi-ques, listening to students' problems, and main-taining the smooth administration of multitudi-nous everyday "emergencies" were established facets of secretarial life.

Correspondingly, the two teachers aides were labor savers for the busy faculty members as the aides graded papers, helped set up audio-visual equipment, coordinated grades, monitored classes to allow teachers to help students individually, end generally supervised classes in the stead of absent teachers.

display efficiency behind the scenes

SECRETARIES Mrs. Bentley, Mrs. Bright, Mrs. Giltner, and Mrs. Thomas assure that all runs smoothly in the office.

The custodial staff of MCHS performed assorted tasks, both usual and unusual in the changing climate at MCHS. Before and after school, as well as during the day, they functioned as electricians, gardeners, lock smiths, and plumbers. In short, they were jacks-of-all-trades. Under their care, windows sparkled, halls gleamed, lockers were unjammed, rooms remained at a comfortable temperature, and the gymnasium floor received a fresh coat of varnish.

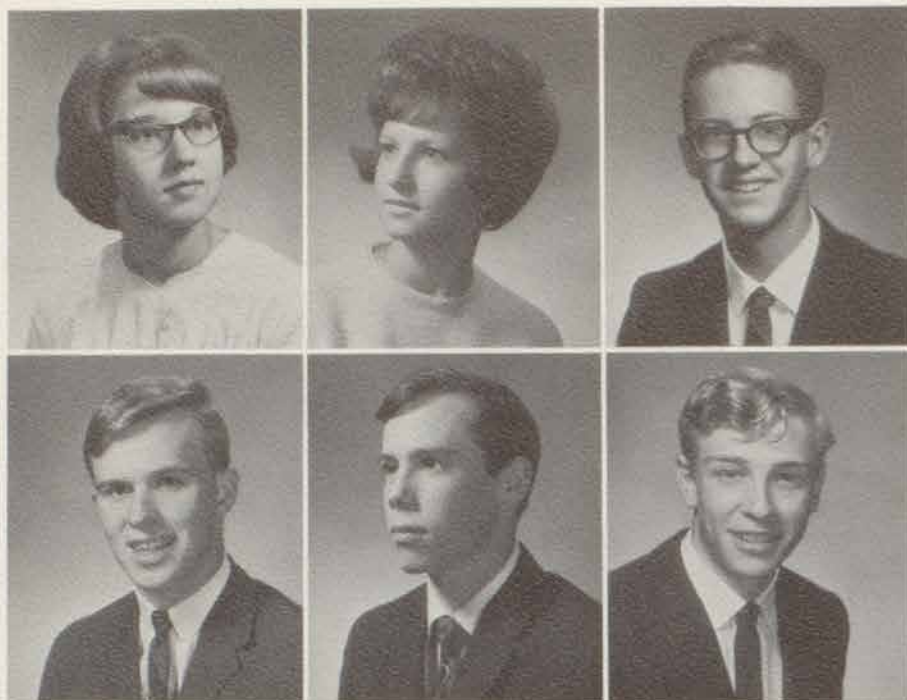

Not all events were pleasant, however. The staff this year experienced the loss of Mr. Weiss, long-time member of the custodial staff. Mr. Weiss will never be forgotten for his dedication to his work.

Madison High experienced its own form of inflation this year. Due to a cut in federal subsidies, lunch prices rose slightly to compensate for this. Early in the morning the cooks arrived to prepare lunches for the students.

ADVERTISING

Perhaps the most transient face of our advancing era is the growth of business. New chain firms replace the familiar establishments. Modernization and innovations in merchandising and manufacturing captures our fancies readily.

Advertising changes with the times, too. It reflects shifting tastes and mores and entices customers. This section, then, is a first-hand study and presentation of the trademarks and merchandise of those who have played a large part in making this book possible—our advertisers.

Gene Sizemore and Terry Lodge, with Miriam Moy, Jane Stout and Mr. Gavin Lodge looking on, toast the fine furniture at 1967 was the year of the unique. It was the year of underground movies and the "Art is Dead" movement, Snoopy and the Red Baron, and the Apollo space tragedy. Musical groups emerged with names such as the "Peanut Butter Conspiracy," "Grateful Dead," and the "Jefferson Airplane." 1967 was the year that was—a year that made a great deal of difference at Madison.

This book has tried to picture the things that have caused Madison High School to be different and the things that have made 1967 a special year, as all other years were special, too.

Change, of course, is many things. It is a

Donovan, a new Beatles' record, a mini-skirt, a happening. Change encompasses electronic music, pop, op, and cop art, the war in Vietnam, and Congressional elections. The whole vast range of life changes continuously. Change affects everyone in every phase of life. Change is life. Change was Madison in 1967.

It is impossible to show every aspect of change in a yearbook or even in an encyclopedia. This year's MAHISCO staff has attempted to give a glimpse of the facets of change at MCHS in 1967—a year of change.

The 1967 MAHISCO Staff would like to express our gratitude to WARD'S STUDIO OF PHOTOGRAPHY, BUD JEFFREY for his pictures on pages 4 and 5, the PHOTOGRAPHY CLUB, DICK KENNARD of NEWSFOTO PUBLISHING COMPANY, the MADISON COURIER, BROOKLYN CULL for information on the volume number, and the FACULTY and ADMINISTRATION for all their cooperation in producing this book.

WE WOULD LIKE to give special acknowledgement to BOB DYLAN for the use of his song title around which we built the theme of this yearbook.
